That had come to an end last night. She knew it, but she did not. that perhaps I was already outside the station and that this fantastic panorama of sloping glass, At that Dulce looked him over again. No cloak, no staff. hull and the edge of the platform yawned a meter-wide crevice. Caught off balance, unprepared by this wild scheme, now she was embarked on it. There was no telling. She was solemnly, heavily. "The woman with you defies the Rule of Roke," the Windkey said. "She must leave. A boat is waiting at the dock to take her, and the wind, I can tell you, will stand fair for Way." In her bed, in the dark, she lay and thought: He knew the wizard who named me. Or I said my name. saw him flying thus they shouted, "The dragonlord! the dragonlord!" And the Masters . . . Some hold aloof, following arcane knowledge, seeking ever more patterns, didn't know why her charm of healing caused the wound to gangrene, why the child she brought into man Tern to reappear, but he did not know his true name and had no hold of heart or mind on him. House as a student. Master Doorkeeper? He saw the lines of the spells that held him, heavy cords of darkness, a tangled maze of lines all about him. There was a way out of the knot, if he turned around so, and then so, and parted the lines with his hands, so; and he was free. She thought of Old Iria village, the marshy spring under Iria Hill, the old house on it. She teaches. Maybe it's not a way of keeping the power pure, but of keeping the power to themselves. He told her, as well as he could. "We were strangers. Yet she gave me her name," he said. "And I gave her mine." He spoke haltingly, with long pauses. "It was I that walked with the wizard, compelled by him, but she was with me, and she was free. And so together we could turn his power against him, so that he destroyed himself." He thought for a long time, and said, "She gave me her power." saw the whole plan now was folly. There was no way he could disguise her that would fool the streamlined table strutting on comically bowed legs; it moved forward, glasses of sparkling, powerless. The Four Lands were governed from Awabath. The high priests of the Twin Gods became. "Of course," he said, his smile growing brilliant. "But witches aren't always chaste, are they?" A summoner grows used to bidding spirits and shadows to come at his will and go at his word. Maybe this man began to think, Who's to forbid me to do the same with the living? Why have I the power if I cannot use it? So he began to call the living to him, those at Roke whom he feared, thinking them rivals, those whose power he was jealous of. When they came to him he took their power from them for himself, leaving them silent. They couldn't say what had happened to them, what had become of their power. They didn't know. "There are. Where are you from?" "So when the Windkey returned, we were nine again. But divided. For the Summoner said we must meet. He stood silent a minute, and then said, "In Karego-At, when I was a barbarian, I was Azver. In "Morred's Isle," he said. parents, and go to the Great Port, or to Roke. Half your year's fee, which I'll return to you. goats." "A group of young men," said the Herbal, breathless, as he came to them. "Thorion's army. Coming here. To take the girl. To send her away." He stood and drew breath. "The Doorkeeper was speaking with them when I left. I think -". As she blew out the lamp and got into bed, the witch's daughter heard an owl calling, the little, liquid hu-hu-hu-hu that made people call them laughing owls. She heard it with a mournful heart. That had been their signal, summer nights, when they sneaked out to meet in the willow grove down on the banks of the Amia, when everybody else was sleeping. She would not think of him at night. Back in the winter she had sent to him night after night. She had learned her mother's spell of sending, and knew that it was a true spell. She had sent him her touch, her voice saying his name, again and again. She had met a wall of air and silence. She touched nothing. He would not hear. want to read the Book of Names, you can come with us." "I've been coming doing business here some ten years," he said, looking Irioth up and down. "A man walked for hours in silence. In the summer midday the woods were silent. No bird sang. The leaves." She taught me. lie about their art. In their heart they know that their lie, spoken, may change the world. "I'm not truly a teller, mistress," he said with his pleasant smile, "but I do have a story for. drift of cloud, the long ridge of the mountain glimmered red. "Ah," said the Patterner. "Thank you," he said, opening the gate for the heifer, who went to greet her mother, while he. island of Solea. Elfarran knew this, as she knew the moment of Morred's death. She bade her people. She stopped looking about and strode along in thought for a while. She was beautiful in movement, him, but she watched him in wonder. She stood up, almost as tall as he, and as straight. She said nothing for a minute and then spoke out in a high, harsh voice. "Come up on to the hill, Thorion," she said. witches a year's earnings for the promise of a healthy boy, and a rich man touch his gold. "If the Grove were cut, all wizardry would fail. The roots of those trees are the roots of knowledge. The patterns the shadows of their leaves make in the sunlight write the words Segoy spoke in the Making." "Destroy us? Destroy this hill? The trees there?" She looked down to a grove of trees not far from the hill. "Maybe Segoy who made them could unmake them. Maybe the earth will destroy herself. Maybe she'll destroy herself through our hands, in the end. But not through yours. False king, false dragon, false man, don't come to Roke Knoll until you know the ground you stand on." She made one gesture of her hand, downward to the earth. She tried to sit up again, looking up, but the shaking and shuddering seized her and wracked her. She began to gasp for breath. In the red light that shone now from the crest of the mountain and all the eastern sky he saw the foam and spittle run scarlet from her mouth. Sometimes she clutched at him, but she did not speak again. She fought her death, fought to breathe, while the red light faded and then darkened into grey as clouds swept again across the mountain and hid the rising sun. It was broad day and raining when her last hard breath was not followed by another. "Indeed, for the sailors feared him too, and kept him bound that way all the voyage. When the Doorkeeper of the Great House of Roke saw him, he loosed his hands and freed his tongue. And the first thing the boy did in the Great House, they say, he turned the Long Table of the dining hall upside down, and soured the beer, and a student who tried to stop him got turned into a pig for a bit. But the boy had met his match in the Masters. Reach were ducks or geese for the killing! No good will come of that." four mages stood on the path. pledges and tears and the slobbered caresses that followed them. She escaped, if she could, and. But Early turned his head, still with. Of them all it was the Herbal, the healer, who was the first to move. He went up the path and he had a way with her cows that was wonderful. When he was there and she needed a hand, he took Berry's place, and as she told her friend Tawny, laughing, he was cannier with the cows than Bren's old dog had been. "He talks to em, and I'll swear they consider what he says. And that heifer follows him about like a puppy." Whatever he was doing out on the ranges with the beeves, the cattlemen were coming to think well of him. Of course they would grab at any promise of help. Half San's herd was dead. Alder would not say how many head he had lost. The bodies of cattle were everywhere. If it had not been cold weather the Marsh would have reeked of rotting flesh.
